Course Description

Painting 1 is an introduction to painting with oils. This course is an introduction to the materials and techniques of oil painting. The semester's subject matter will explore a variety of genre and contain both class-selected assignments as well as personally driven projects. 4 major paintings total and additional studies

Prerequisites: Art 1113 2D Design, 1123 3D Design, 1323 Drawing II or consent of instructor

Assignments

Painting 1 will place emphasis on the vocabulary and properties of color and color mixing as integral to painting as well as other studio practices. Furthermore, emphasis is placed on alla-prima method of painting, glazing with layered application, and experimental techniques. Expectations are addressed through the assignment sheet, demos in class, online videos, and past student examples available on D2L. Students are highly encouraged to view online materials to resolve their own paintings.

Work Ethic and Studio Environment

Personal motivation and discipline are keys to a student's success in this course. These qualities are demonstrated by actions - such as preparation for each class, involvement in projects, discussions, and critiques, and reaching a strong level of finish according to project criteria. All work should be stored and transported in a manner that preserves it for critiques and portfolio reviews. Students should expect to spend at least six hours per week on homework in addition to studio/class time.

Students will be required to work within the painting studios only; no other rooms in Fain should be used due to safety concerns and clean up required. When doing so, be aware of other classes working times. You may, however, use a space outside of the university if such exists. Note proper ventilation, clean up, disposal of materials, and archival concerns if doing so.

Use studio space for class, open from 7:00 a.m. - 1:00 a.m. when the night monitor is present and 7:00 a.m. - 10 p.m. otherwise. See posted schedule when available.

Grading

Student work will be reviewed by means of formal critique evaluations and portfolio reviews. Students will be evaluated according to predetermined requirements for all paintings. Individual projects will have a grade weight attached when given to the class.
