Course Description

This course covers marketing theories and application-based simulations with an objective of understanding international marketing behavior. This course will focus on evaluating new international market opportunities, developing market entry strategies, and regional expansion. You will learn how to manage these activities to create customer value internationally. The value creation process involves understanding customers, collaborators, competitors, and a company's own core competencies, all within the context of the social, political, economic, cultural, and regulatory environments in which the firm operates, and using this knowledge for competitive advantage and growth. Lectures, mini simulations, and a 3D full simulation will be used. The simulation will entail selecting a new international market for entry, establishing a brand presence in that market, and expanding into additional foreign markets. In addition to course slides, textbook chapters, and academic journal articles, you are encouraged to read relevant news about marketing and business from the Wall Street Journal, Financial Times, and The Economist.
